Table notes

Although the headline ranking figures show changes in the data year to year, the pattern of clustering among the schools is equally significant. Some 170 points separate HEC Paris at the top, from the school ranked number 60. The top 12 business schools, from HEC to Essec Business School, form the top group of schools. The second group is headed by Stockholm School of Economics, which would need to increase its score by four per cent overall in order to enter the top group. The third group is headed by Solvay Business School.

Footnotes

- These data are for information only and are not used in the rankings.
- The Cems programme was ranked number two in the European Masters in Management 2007 rankings, but it has not been included in the European Business Schools 2007 ranking as it is a programme and not a school.
- School was not included in the published 2007 ranking for this survey.
- School participated in full ranking on the basis of a joint programme only. Underlying score based on proportion of total score.
- School participated with more than one programme in full ranking. Underlying score based on combined scores.
- Ranked one apart in Masters 2007 but equal in context of overall European ranking due to closeness of scores
